Anything Can Happen: Tips To Being Prepared

Being prepared well ahead of your event will pay off. To kickstart planning your event in 100 Mile House, use the following list to custom build your own event-planning list:

Determine the size of your event.

What is the purpose of your event? Is it a meeting, wedding, sports event? How many attendees are you hoping to attend?

Select the date for your event.

To make sure your date does not conflict with an annual event, research the South Cariboo community calendar.

View the community calendar here

Select a venue and confirm booking details.

What kind of insurance/permits does the venue require? Can alcohol be served? Before committing, investigate the requirements.

Develop an event plan.

Recording every detail of your event will ensure you don't miss any tasks.

Request estimates.

Some costs to consider:

- Room rental
- Food and beverages
- Equipment rental
- Speaker fees
- Travel for staff
- Insurance and other permits
- Entertainment

Create a budget for your event.

Record your costs from the list above and determine how much your event will cost—this will give you an opportunity to plan areas of savings.

Create an event committee.

This could be as formal as an event manager or chair with sub-committees. Delegating tasks that can be performed leading up to the event to family and friends can also be a helpful way to organize planning.

Identify guest speakers/presenters/entertainment.

Confirm who is available, and create a schedule for each presenter with information about green rooms, directions, and pre-arrival times.

Sell early-bird tickets.

If possible, offer early-bird registration to create excitement ahead of your event.

Prepare your paperwork.

Make sure your registration forms are accessible, inclusive, and easy to use for all.
